PROFESSORS AND GUEST SPEAKERS

Ms. Sarah Korpak, MSN, RN-BC, CNE:

Ms. Sarah Korpak is a Lecturer in the GEPN program at Yale University School of Nursing. She holds an Associate's Degree in Nursing from Three Rivers Community College, a Bachelor's in the Science of Nursing and Master's in the Science of Nursing (Education) from Sacred Heart University. She is currently competing her Doctorate in Nursing Education (EdD) at Southern Connecticut State University. Her Professional Associations include The American Nurses Association, American Society for Peri-Anesthesia Nurses, Sigma Theta Tau International, and both the Connecticut and National Leagues for Nursing.

Ms. Korpak began her career at Yale School of Nursing as a medical-surgical preceptor in 2014 with the GEPN program. She enjoys the chance to cultivate adult learners, and her philosophy on nursing education fosters an atmosphere that challenges all students to achieve their goals through experiences that emphasizes the critical thinking process while respecting the intrinsic differences that make adult learners unique and special.

Dr. Marianne Cosgrove, CRNA, DNAP, APRN:

Dr. Marianne Cosgrove has been a Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetist since January, 1991. She is a graduate of the Yale New Haven Hospital School of Nurse Anesthesia (formerly the Hospital of St. Raphael School of Nurse Anesthesia) and received her Master's degree in the Biological Sciences: Anesthesia from Central CT State University in 1993. In May, 2011, she received a Doctor of Nurse Anesthesia Practice degree from Virginia Commonwealth University. At present, she is a Clinical Faculty member at Yale University, a practicing CRNA at YNHH's St. Raphael's Campus, and the program director of the Yale New Haven Hospital School of Nurse Anesthesia. She is also the founder and co-owner of Core Concepts Anesthesia Review, LLC, a review course and testing service designed to prepare student registered nurse anesthetists to take the National Certification Exam. Dr. Cosgrove is currently a Ph.D. candidate in Health Related Sciences: Nurse Anesthesia at Virginia Commonwealth University. Her research interests include the stress load of student registered nurse anesthetists, optimization of study and test-taking skills and human factors and performance as it relates to patient safety. Her dissertation research is focused on the effect of elevated ambient noise in the OR on anesthetist situation awareness and performance, particularly during critical phases of the anesthetic.

Dr. Millie Hepburn, PhD, ACNS-BC, SCRNP:

Dr. Millie Hepburn completed her PhD at Seton Hall University in 2016, and has published and presented her work in cultural competency and it impacts patient safety as well as organizational culture. With 35 years of experience in nursing, Dr. Hepburn has published on a variety of topics related to cultural competency, neuroscience nursing care, neuroscience infections, stroke care, wound care and health literacy. She has received awards for program planning, health promotion and mentoring.

In her current study, she is evaluating the variables that affect stroke risk among urban Black women. In her earlier research into the variables affection health promotion as an advanced practice nurse, Dr. Hepburn was able to develop in depth knowledge of family centered care and was able to better understand health as it relates to the value of family, culture and community.

This work led to the development of a collaborative community engagement program and an insider view of the diverse spiritual community within a small city. This program offered an opportunity to develop partnerships with the US Department of Health and Human Services and the American Stroke Association.

Though committed partnerships with her nurse colleagues, she launched an innovative program in developing organizational interdisciplinary cultural competency in 2002. The program is now a flagship competency based cultural competency certificate program.

As a translational research scholar (T-32) at Columbia University, Dr. Hepburn developed a new understanding of population health while working with interdisciplinary teams with a research focus in epidemiology, pharmacology, medicine, sociology or public health.

As a PhD prepared nurse scientist, she has gained novel insight as to the relationships of these disparities through work in community-based population based research. Her goal revolves around increasing the efficacy of community based programs and longitudinal research in health disparities.

She was elected to the board of trustees for the American Association of Neuroscience Nurses in 2012. She was appointed to participate in the two-year process of developing national guidelines for stroke and stroke rehabilitation care in collaboration with the American Medical Association. Her experiences in population based research, epidemiology, public service and clinical nursing have facilitated original research inquiry in regard to preventable conditions in at risk populations.
